

Deepti

Kept forgiving her abusive, unfaithful husband, expecting change with each apology, despite her financial security

- At 38, Deepti, an MBA and career-focused mother of two, faced a tumultuous 14 year abusive marriage.
- Her husband's repeated infidelity, created a challenging environment for her and the children
- She was verbally abused, blamed, and given unsupportive advice from her parents, to tolerate the abuse
- Despite co-owning the flat, Deepti felt overwhelmed by stretched finances, covering loan EMIs & childcare expenses
- She finally made the challenging decision to leave, uncertain about where to start her journey to independence

How ISF helped her

- Initially, Deepti kept abuse and infidelity hidden, confiding only in her family due to overwhelming shame
- ISF provided critical support, offering free counselling, legal support for guidance and a customised safety plan
- Deepti took legal action, filing a case of emotional abuse against her husband & prioritising her children's education
- Deepti endured a 5-year legal battle, securing a divorce, child custody, and financial support for child's education
- She achieved career advancements, salary increase, and effective balance of responsibilities with a nanny's assistance
- Finally found the peace and stability she longed for
